LIFELONG LEARNING

LIVING HISTORY

1968-74

ABOUT THE COURSE

This unique, once-in-a-lifetime Living History course offers participants the opportunity to learn about this troubled era in Northern Ireland's recent history through the first-hand perspectives of some of the leading cultural, political and media figures from the period.

Beginning with the Civil Rights march in 1968, and ending at the Ulster Worker's Strike in 1974, the course will provide a rich and diverse understanding of the origins, consequences and legacy of the Northern Irish conflict.

FACILITATOR

This programme of events will be co-ordinated and facilitated by former TV producer Peter Weil, whose extensive credits include Newsnight, Panorama, The Wogan Show, and many more of the BBC's flagship programmes. Peter will also be joined by veteran broadcaster and Scene Around Six newsreader Walter Love.
